The ICE-MAKER

When Blunderbunny awoke, he found the whole world bathed in a surprisingly warm winter sunshine. Delighted, he shed his winter layer of fur, and scampered out into the park, where the snow had already melted away.

But when he came to the pond, he found Bunky standing there, sadly gazing at the lonely cake of ice that was fast melting under the warm sun.

Blunderbunny went over and thumped his friend on the back. "Hi, chum," he said. "Why so glum—OWWW!"

Hastily, Blunderbunny withdrew his hand, noticing for the first time the pair of ice-skates slung over Bunky's shoulder.

"That's why I'm so glum," Bunky mourned. "I wanted to go ice-skating this morning—an' the ice is all gone!"

"Ah, shed that gloom, you toomb," said Blunderbunny, "and watch me zoom!"

Like a flash, Blunderbunny whizzed into the nearby refrigerating plant. Within three minutes, he had slung together a couple of freezing coils, twelve ice-trays, two home freezers, and six icicles, put the whole contraption on a pair of skis, and headed back to Bunky.

But all the bewildered Bunky saw was a miniature snowstorm heading this way. The temperature dropped thirty degrees in one minute, and the shivering Bunky began to run for shelter—only to be brought up short by a shout from the midst of the snow-storm! "Hey, Bunky!" the voice called. "Don't run away—it's only me—Blunderbunny!"

Amazed, Bunky stood alock still as the snow-storm approached and swirled around him, not knowing whether his teeth were chattering from the cold or from fear. But when Blunderbunny himself materialized from the very center of the frigid blizzard, holding two fur coats in his arms, Bunky began hopping with glee.

"How'd ya do it?" Bunky asked, donning one of the coats. "Only a minute ago, the temperature was fifty degrees, an' now it must be ten below zero!"

Blunderbunny pointed with pride to the core of the snow squall, where amid the thickly swirling snowflakes, his contraption could dimly be seen. "With my new super-cold freezer-refrigerator-arctic-blizzard-maker! It's guaranteed to freeze solid any body of water smaller than the Atlantic Ocean! Now you can go ice-skating on the pond!"

Happily, Bunky strapped on his skates and stood up. "Yeah, but: the pond—where is it?"

Startled, Blunderbunny peered through the blizzard that was now raging around him. "I can't see it," he said. "But it's off in this direction—follow me!"

Blunderbunny took two steps—and felt himself hurtling down through a huge snow-drift! By the time he landed and scraped enough snow from his eyes to look around, there was Bunky alongside him, head stuck in the snow, feet madly thrashing.

"W . . . wot hopen?" spluttered Bunky when Blunderbunny finally released him. "Where are we?"

Sadly, Blunderbunny told him. "We're at the bottom of a fifty-foot snow-drift, Bunky! I . . . I guess we'll just have to wait for the Spring thaws to come—because in a few minutes we'll be frozen stiff! But if it'll make you feel any better, you can call me a big stiff!"

The GREAT NUT MYSTERY

Whoo-Doodit the great Owl Detective; sat in his office, dozing. He couldn't understand why he'd been so sleepy and tired these last few days—especially since he'd always gotten a full night's sleep. But . . . ho-hum . . . maybe a little nap would fix . . . him . . . up . . . SNORE! Whoo-Doodit was fast asleep.

Suddenly, there was an excited pounding at his door. With a start, Whoo-Doodit leaped out of his chair, used his magnifying glass to find his skeleton key, then used the magnifying glass to find the keyhole, and finally opened the door.

There stood Charlie Chipmunk and Sammy Squirrel, both excitedly chattering away. "Quiet, quiet!" ordered Whoo-Doodit. "Now tell me, one at a time—what's the trouble?"

"Our food!" exclaimed Charlie. "Someone's been stealing our winter's supply of nuts!"

"Yes," cried Sammy. "and you're the only one who can know anything about it, because—"

"Because I'm the greatest detective in the world, eh?" beamed Whoo-Doodit. "How right you are! And now you can both stop worrying, because Whoo-Doodit is now on the case! Tonight, I'll lie in wait in the shrubbery around your nut warehouse, and when the culprit sneaks in to do his dirty work, I'll nab him!"

With that, Whoo-Doodit began ushering his visitors out of the office. "But you don't understand," protested Charlie. "We only came to you be-

"I know, I know," said Whoo-Doodit, firmly pushing them out of the door and closing it on them. "Say no more—I am a very modest detective, and too many compliments embarrass me!"

Whoo-Doodit went to bed early that night, determined to wake up at midnight, when he would make his way out to the nut warehouse to take up his vigil. But the great detective slept on and on, pleasantly dreaming about approaching the vast pile of nuts in the warehouse, and suddenly grabbing the thief—like THIS—!

Whoo-Doodit suddenly awoke, feeling someone's hands grabbing him in a grip of iron. Startled, he opened his eyes, and was astonished to find himself in the nut warehouse, among the vast piles of nuts. Then Whoo-Doodit looked down to see who had grabbed him—and was astounded to find that he had grabbed himself!

Instantly, Charlie Chipmunk and Sammy Squirrel poked their heads out from the midst of a pile of nuts, and ran to Whoo-Doodit, pointing accusingly at him.

"You're the thief!" they shouted. "You've been stealing our food! We figured it had to be you, since you're the only one who didn't bother to gather any nuts for the winter, and yet you're always so fat and well fed!"

"I . . . I must've been doing it in my sleep," stammered the detective. "I . . . I didn't know I was a sleep-walker!"

But suddenly, Whoo-Doodit brightened with a brilliant idea. "But now that I've caught your thief for you," he said, "I'll just collect my fee—enough nuts to last me a whole winter!"

BLACKHEADS "PET HATE"

Say Men, Girls
in Choosing Date

What a remarkable fact is that the most popular girls in the school are the ones who have no blackheads on their faces.
And the reason for this is that blackheads are the enemy of a clear complexion.

It is a fact that the girls who have blackheads are the ones who are least popular in the school.

So if you want to be popular in the school, you must get rid of your blackheads.

YOUR face is your biggest asset. It is the first thing people notice when they meet you. So it is important that you keep it clear and bright.
